GROUP REPORTS

English has been described as “the language of opportunity”, and by the time you get to the end of this report, I’m pretty sure you’ll agree.

WHY WE SHOULD KNOW ENGLISH

Well, English is the language you’ll be able to use most widely, as it’s spoken in more countries than any other language. a whopping 60 of the world’s 196 countries have English as their official language: the USA, Australia, Canada, New Zealand, to name but a few. And it is the commonly adopted second language of people in a great many more countries. In total, around 1.5 billion people speak English worldwide.

“English will open up more opportunities for you”

Being able to speak English allows you to communicate effectively in numerous countries, and this opens up lots of possibilities for you in terms of the countries you could choose to seek work in one day – not to mention travel to as a tourist. You won't have to worry about getting lost when you travel to an English-speaking country, as you'll easily be able to ask for directions, and taking guided tours, ordering food and chatting to the locals will no longer be a source of stress.

Means that if you can speak English, you'll find that you have a greater number of possible careers to choose from after you finish at university. And more important is you can make oversea new friends.

As we've seen, it's also an incredibly useful language to learn because so many countries speak it. You'll be in a much stronger position to apply for jobs overseas if you've reached a good level of fluency. English has been referred to as “the language of business”, and it’s not hard to see why. If you have ambitions to become an international businessperson, it’s essential that you’re able to speak English fluently; business conducted internationally is done in English more often than not. Even if you’re not thinking of living and working abroad, that doesn’t mean you won’t find English a helpful language to put on your CV. There may well be plenty of English-speaking multinational corporations with offices in your home country.

“English gives you wider access to knowledge”

Did you know that 55% of the world’s webpages are written in English? This absolutely dwarfs that of any other language, It is also the language of science. If you learn English, you won’t just have access to a greater proportion of the vast amount of knowledge available on the web; you’ll be able to educate yourself still further by being able to read scientific books and papers. Within the Science Citation Index, compiled by the Institute for Scientific Information, an estimated 95% of articles are written in English despite only around half being from English-speaking countries.

FUKUOKA ENGLISH CAMP

I was very excited after I heard from Mako that we will have even coming up, we were excited to planned about food, the place, people, the kids, how it going to be as the same time also Mako was so worried with those thing, with something that we have never done before. Neither I because I want to make best for everyone but I have no idea about teaching or kids that scared me the most. But this is also opportunity to do something new and learn about my self and improved something for sure.

The nearly day is coming up I have noticed the challenge has arrived for the desert with that ingredients is not exist in Japan so I tried to order it but also restaurants they do not have it. Finally what a lucky me, my tempura boss recommended to put Thai tea favour instead of Pandan leaves after that I was happy with a result.

Those three days past very fast I was enjoyed with kids, talked to parents they told their stories and exchanged it was so good to know that they have been realized how important for the kids to learn second language such as English and know that English is not just a language but it has good effect for their own career and kids future also they want the kids can grown up with different opportunities in their own life

At the end of the even I waved good-bye to kids and family. Keeping the memories of the place, great stories around the room, the sweet smell of the food and most important the all staff who worked hard and helped us to make this happened. I realized that knowing to stop too much force only work and head up for people, for environment, for someone and show some love, smile and enjoy together that will never be for getting, I would leave with a smile on my face, knowing I would be back next year.
